Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1905.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

It is appropriate that Professor Boni should be uncovering skeletons in Rome.

Clad in pajamas and a raincoat, the President addressed an Arkansas crowd from his train yesterday. It was probably one of those breezy speeches.

With 886 victims to its discredit (without mentioning the wounded) the American railroad last year was eleven ahead of its record of the previous year. Broken records of that nature are not sought.

A Montpelier paper divulges the information that "drunks continue to appear with the accustomed regularity in the Barre police court," apparently overlooking the fact that there were seven arrests for intoxication in one night in Montpelier. Come, neighbor, pick the beam or mote or whatever it is out of your eye.

Governor Jeff Davis of Arkansas took the opportunity to launch in a fiery defense of lynch law when he introduced President Roosevelt at Little Rock yesterday, whereat one of the gentlemen seated on the platform remarked: "We do not stand for him here." Gov. Davis displayed a characteristic lack of sense of the proprieties of the occasion. He was delegated to introduce the guest and made a mess of it by intruding the subject of lynching into an address of welcome.

There are just six short of five hundred automobiles registered in Vermont, and a remarkable thing is that there has not been a single prosecution under the registration act, although there have been a few inquiries as to the ownership of certain numbered machines. It is an indication that the great majority of motor car drivers act the gentleman and do not try to "hog" the entire road. If there are victims of bigness they should bear in mind that the law allows them an avenue for action.

Says the New York Globe: "All talk of the negro's 'place' is prejudicial. The negro's place is any place he may be fitted to occupy. The higher the place he is fitted to occupy the better it will be for the Southern white people. Only in proportion as the negro is trained to higher things in muscle, mind, and morals will the black belt as a whole come up. Tuskegee may be working primarily for the negro, but the triumph of its spirit means as much to the race which claims to be superior. The Vardaman who would prevent negro education and would narrow the meshes of exclusion are the men of whom the South should beware, rather than those like the President, who deem it wise conspicuously to honor negroes of notable individual merit."

In the course of his address to the students of Dartmouth college last Sunday, President William J. Tucker spoke on the keeping of the Sabbath day, and his words are worthy of a wider audience. President Tucker said in part: "The fourth commandment created a great religious, moral and beneficent institution—the Sabbath. By it God arrested time in the interests of religion and personal freedom. This commandment said to every man: 'Stop, think of your God and of your fellow man.' It broke the greatest tyranny of the world, the tyranny of work. It was the greatest protective institution of the Israelitish nation. And what is the significance of the Sabbath today? The Sabbath stands for reverence. Again, Sunday is the great safeguard against injustice. If it were not for the Sabbath, I do not know how human nature could bear up under the tyranny of work. The Sabbath gives a blessed respite from work and kindred activities. I would not lay down arbitrary rules for men in the midst of city temptations and allurements; each and every case should be decided according to its own merits. But the college student does not need Sunday for amusement. There is no argument of pity or charity about it. He needs to spend the day in quiet with himself. The real question is: How far can we go in the expression of our outward religion and keep true to our inward religion? Do we think of men in terms of success or do we think of the souls of men? What of our soul, and what are we doing with it—our own soul that we are dwelling with? The Sabbath stands for God's great reminder of the human soul. Be still, and know that God is

Tuesday while Frank Jewell of Corinth was going on foot to a neighbors he saw a nice buck in a field not far from him. Mr. Jewell hastened to a neighbors and secured a rifle, and returning fired two bullets, one taking effect in the side and the other crashing into the shoulder. The buck ran a half mile, lying down several times, to get up and run again as Mr. Jewell approached, until from loss of blood and exhaustion he could continue the chase no longer. He was a nice two year old buck weighing about 140 pounds, but his antlers were badly broken doubtless from fighting. Mr. Jewell brought the carcass to Chelsea Wednesday morning and sold it to Messrs. Spear & Bacon in whose meat market it hangs on exhibition.

Martin Spiller, an old resident who lived in the north part of the town with his nephew, Leslie Smith, died Monday, the 23, after general decline in health for about two years. The funeral was held from the house, Wednesday forenoon, and the interment was in Highland cemetery.

NOTICE.

Whereas, It has been the custom in years past for the several merchants to contribute goods, wares and merchandise to society fairs of every kind and sort upon the urgent request of a soliciting committee from the society proposing to hold such fair or amusement; and

Whereas, It has become a burden upon one and all of the merchants composing this association, and is becoming a greater burden each year; Therefore be it

Resolved, by this association in meeting assembled, that it is the sense of this meeting that the practice of giving presents or prizes, as well as the practice of inserting advertisements in programmes is detrimental to good business, and an injury to all, and is to be condemned; and

Resolved further, that we, each and all, agree to discontinue the same as far as we are individually concerned from this date.

A Good Part Well Played

Good Furs play an important part in Winter dress and ours are the kinds that play the part well. That they are not the cheapest to be had is true, for we don't sell any kind of a pelt that has hair on it, but we do sell every kind of a Fur that has honest wear in it and that quality that makes once a Fur-buyer HERE always a Fur buyer HERE. Then, too, we follow the style closely. Whatever Dame Fashion says is correct we have it.
